What is National Preventive Mechanism; NPM – against torture?

The Commissioner for Fundamental Rights acts as National Preventive Mechanism, proceeding, with the cooperation of his colleagues and within his special procedural rights and competences, in the interests of preventing people held in various places of detention from being subjected to torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

What is torture?

Any act by which pain, whether physical or mental, is intentionally inflicted on a person for such purposes as obtaining from him a confession, punishing him, when such pain or suffering is inflicted by or at the instigation of or with the acquiescence of a public official or other person acting in an official capacity.

When can we speak of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment?

When someone tries to project and increase domination through intimidating, humiliating, physically or emotionally hurting a detainee.

What can be considered as a place of detention?

We use this term in a broader than usual sense. Places of detention include, in addition to penitentiary institutions and police detention facilities, any and all places where inmates, inpatients and detainees have to stay by order of any judicial, administrative or other authority, and which the persons residing therein are not permitted to leave at will and at any time, and where they are forcibly taken back to in the event they try to leave without authorization.

Behind bars

The tasks of the National Preventive Mechanism are as follows:

- preventive and complaint-driven visits to places of detention
 - interviewing detainees
 - inspecting the documentation
- providing feedback
- consulting with the authorities
- making recommendations
- publishing reports.

Is the scheduling of visits known in advance?

No, the National Preventive Mechanism shall not publish its schedule in advance.

Who participate in the activities of the National Preventive Mechanism?

- lawyers, psychologists and physicians working at the OPCAT NPM Department, established within the Office of the Commissioner for Fundamental Rights; and occasionally
- outside experts, recognized authorities of a given topic.
